

Debra Nicholson Bassham
840 Instructional Computer Graphics
Instructor: Denise Richards
Spring 2013

nbs

nicholson business services ©

*P*art 2

Illustrator
Recolor 1930's Poster

Genetics Home Reference

Your Guide to Understanding Genetic Conditions

Search

Home Conditions Genes Chromosomes Handbook Glossary Resources

Home>Conditions>Genes

What is a gene?

A gene is the basic physical and functional unit of heredity. Genes, which are made up of DNA, act as instructions to make molecules called proteins. In humans, genes vary in size from a few hundred DNA bases to more than 2 million bases. The Human Genome Project has estimated that humans have between 20,000 and 25,000 genes.

Every person has two copies of each gene, one inherited from each parent. Most genes are the same in all people, but a small number of genes (less than 1 percent of the total) are slightly different between people. Alleles are forms of the same gene with small differences in their sequence of DNA bases.

These small differences contribute to each person's unique physical features.

This website is certified by Health On the Net Foundation. Click to verify.  This site complies with the HONcode standard for trustworthy health information: verify here.

The image shows a website header for "Genetics Home Reference" with a search bar and navigation tabs. The main content area features a breadcrumb trail, a search instruction, a list of categories, a featured section for "Blood/lymphatic system" with a list of conditions and a list of "Most Often Viewed" items, and a search prompt. The footer contains certification information.

Genetics Home Reference

Your Guide to Understanding Genetic Conditions

Search

Home Conditions Genes Chromosomes Handbook Glossary Resources

Home>Conditions

Find a specific condition or related topic by first letter:
1-9 | A | B | C | D | E | F | G | H | I | J | K | L | M | N | O | P | Q | R | S | T | U | V | W | X | Y | Z

Find a disease by category:

Blood/lymphatic system

Bones, muscles, and connective tissues

Most Often Viewed

- trisomy 13
- Down syndrome
- cystic fibrosis
- Lynch syndrome
- Tay-Sachs disease
- sickle cell disease
- cri-du-chat syndrome
- Klinefelter syndrome
- triple X syndrome
- Huntington disease

Or use Search at the top of the page.

This website is certified by Health On the Net Foundation. Click to verify.  This site complies with the HONcode standard for trustworthy health information: verify here.

Dzhokar Tsarnaev Finally Moves Off Campus

News in Brief • Breaking News: Boston • Breaking • News • ISSUE 49•18

Apr 29, 2013

BOSTON After living in residence halls during his first three semesters at the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth, sophomore student Dzhokar Tsarnaev was finally able to get a place of his own and move off campus this week, the 19-year-old told reporters. "Last semester I shared a double room with a guy at Pine Dale Hall, but now I've got a place off campus with no roommate, which is nice," the engineering student said of his new living arrangements, a 10-by-10-foot room located on the first floor of a decommissioned military base about an hour and 40 minutes north from the university. "It's been pretty sweet so far. The building is really safe, I don't have to share a sink with anyone, and living off campus is a lot cheaper than the dorms. Of course, the downside is that the neighbors suck. But I've been thinking about this for a long time now, so I'm glad I finally did it." Tsarnaev added that although he's no longer required to be on a meal plan, he decided to sign up for the 10-meal-per week option and add some extra Dining Dollars.

Obama Orders Reinvasion Of Iraq After Illuminating Trip Through Bush Presidential Library

DALLAS After taking an "eye-opening" tour of the newly dedicated George W. Bush Presidential Library and Museum in Dallas Thursday, President Barack Obama reportedly ordered the United States military to reinvade Iraq. The president told reporters that the museum's numerous displays provided illuminating information concerning the ongoing threat posed by Iraq and the necessity of re-deploying combat troops in order to bring stability and lasting democracy to the troubled country.

"I have no doubt in my mind, after spending some time in Mr. Bush's library and museum, that the United States simply must intervene in Iraq in order to temper volatility in the Middle Eastern region as a whole," Obama said, noting that bombers and approximately 250,000 ground troops were currently en route to the Middle Eastern nation. "The way I now see it, we have a responsibility as Americans to create that kind of change and to lead the world by example." (POLITICS)

John Kerry Lost Somewhere In Gobi Desert

SOUTHERN MONGOLIA After failing to arrive at his destination in the Middle East this week for diplomatic talks with state leaders, sources confirmed that U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry had inadvertently traveled to Central Asia and is currently lost somewhere in the Gobi Desert. "Hello! Hello, is there anybody out there who can hear me?" the exhausted five-term senator reportedly said while stumbling across the vast desert expanse. "My name is John Forbes Kerry! I am the United States Secretary of State, and I am lost! Oh, God, almost out of water. Gotta make it back somehow...gotta make it back." At press time, Kerry was reportedly relieved to have spotted a lush oasis off in the distance and was happily envisioning eating a juicy fig. (POLITICS)

Obama Orders Reinvasion Of Iraq After Illuminating Trip Through Bush Presidential Library

DALLAS—

After taking an “eye-opening” tour of the newly dedicated George W. Bush Presidential Library and Museum in Dallas Thursday, President Barack Obama reportedly ordered the United States military to invade Iraq. The president told reporters that the museum’s numerous displays provided illuminating information concerning the ongoing threat posed by Iraq and the necessity of re-deploying combat troops in order to bring stability and lasting democracy to the troubled country.

“I have no doubt in my mind, after spending some time in Mr. Bush’s library and museum, that the United States simply must intervene in Iraq in order to temper volatility in the Middle Eastern region as a whole,” Obama said, noting that bombers and approximately 250,000 ground troops were currently en route to the Middle Eastern nation. “The way I now see it, we have a responsibility as Americans to create that kind of change and to lead the world by example.”

“Though it will not be easy, our work in Iraq will ensure a better life for the Iraqis,” Obama continued. “And they will, I am confident, greet us as liberators.”

Pointing to the array of informational displays and exhibits housed in the former president’s 226,000-square-foot educational facility, Obama said he was “absolutely convinced” that al-Qaeda has established a major foothold in Iraq and that the people of Iraq deserved to live in a society that is “free of fear and free of want.”

“Let me go a step further and say that if we do not act now to enact a regime change in Iraq, the consequences will be dire,” Obama said, adding that, as evidenced by documents he read in the Bush museum, Iraq was likely the axis upon which the entire Middle Eastern region turns. “It is a hotbed for terrorism, and, as demonstrated by the Bush archives, invading Iraq will allow us to put a stop to those religious extremists who actively seek to harm the U.S. and hold America hostage.”

“They hate our freedoms,” Obama continued.

Obama added that though engaging Iraq might result in a protracted conflict, he was confident upon further researching the library’s materials that the United Nations and the international community would come together to support such a necessary, morally justifiable endeavor.

“Working together with our numerous allies, we can and will be an agent of change,” the president said, thanking his predecessor for making a “truly convincing case” for military intervention in Iraq. “Through our noble efforts, we will transform Iraq into a bastion of democracy and cause peace to spread throughout the region, ensuring stability and prosperity in the Middle East for generations to come.”

“I stand by this decision because I know it is the right thing to do,” Obama added before leaving the museum. “And I think history will judge me accordingly.”

John Kerry Lost Somewhere In Gobi Desert

SOUTHERN MONGOLIA—After failing to arrive at his destination in the Middle East this week for diplomatic talks with state leaders, sources confirmed that U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry had inadvertently traveled to Central Asia and is currently lost somewhere in the Gobi Desert. “Hello! Hello, is there anybody out there who can hear me?” the exhausted five-term senator reportedly said while stumbling across the vast desert expanse. “My name is John Forbes Kerry! I am the United States Secretary of State, and I am lost! Oh, God, almost out of water. Gotta make it back somehow...gotta make it back.” At press time, Kerry was reportedly relieved to have spotted a lush oasis off in the distance and was happily envisioning eating a juicy fig.

CONSTITUTION USA with Peter Segal
PREMIERES TUES MAY 7 9/8c

How to replace tiles (1-5)

©Hartley (1986) Designing Instructional Text; 2nd Ed.; Nichols Publishing Company New York, New York 10024 ISBN 0-89397-218-5
Debra Nicholson-Bassham 840 Assignment 2/27/13

Glowing Outdoor Orbs

Just stuff the glass shades full of mini lights and place them outside in your favorite place for a nice evening glow!
Attach an extension cord if you need to and hide it under your garden dirt or mulch.
Put the lights on a timer so they come on every night at dusk. Aren't they nice!

Buy two glass shades for $2!

Stuff them with old xmas lights with missing bulbs

Hide lights in back yard in the day time

Enjoy lights in back yard at night time